Dear Parents/Carers

Rapid Antigen Test Protocol for Department of Education.

Protection through registration

People who test positive using a COVID-19 rapid antigen test at home must register with Service NSW when they get their result. This helps people:

- quickly understand their relative level of risk
- access support from NSW Health

You do not need to register if you've had:

- a negative or invalid rapid antigen test result
- a positive PCR test in the 28 days before your positive rapid antigen test.

Customers who need help with registering their result can call Service NSW on 13 77 88.

What else to do if you test positive

- Immediately self-isolate for 7 days from the day you tested positive using the rapid antigen test.
- You should also tell any social, work or education contacts you've had contact within the previous 48 hours that you have COVID-19.
- Your household should also isolate for 7 days
- Your social and other contacts must get tested if they have symptoms.

Yours Sincerely

Patricia Howard

Principal
